We describe a course in History of Mathematics, which is being offered via the Web for the second time in Spring 2001. Course objectives, topics covered, and assigned readings will be discussed, and an overview of the course web site presented. The use of WebBoard to facilitate discussions on topics, to promote interaction, and to critique writing assignments will be addressed, along with the use of WebCT for exam administration. Related issues of interest to faculty will also be discussed, e.g. preparation time, “office hours,” intellectual property. (Received October 11, 2000)
