Final exam schedules are often determined by the meeting time for classes. At Christian Brothers University, some departments asked for accommodations to allow all the sections of a particular class to have the final exam on the same period. For example, all sections of Math 105 would have the final exam on Tuesday from 1:00 - 3:00 P.M. This will allow the instructors to give a common departmental final examination. Clearly, the exam schedule becomes much harder to obtain. This presentation describes a solution I designed which Christian Brothers University adopted. The final exam schedule now allows for some classes to have a common final exam, while others stay scheduled based on the class meeting time. The schedule does not contain any conflicts and minimizes the number of final exams a student will have to take on any given day during the final exam week. (Received September 15, 2000)
