Let $K$ and $L$ be two convex bodies containing the origin. If for each hyperplane passing through the origin, the projection of $K$ can be rotated around the origin to fit inside the projection of $L$, can $K$ be rotated to fit into $L$? We will present counterexamples and additional conditions so that the result is true. (Received September 02, 2014)