In this talk, I will detail the theoretical grounds for a semidefinite-programming-based method that computes best approximants by splines under some general constraints and relative to several function norms, notably the max-norm. The method has been implemented as a MATLAB package called Basc, which relies on the two external packages Chebfun and CVX. (Received January 04, 2015)