
We show that a highly symmetric compact surface satisfying a mean curvature type equation can be desingularized provided the linearization is non-degenerate at the surface. This condition is simpler and perhaps easier to verify in practice than others that we know of. It is not clear at this point how the highly symmetric case informs the case without symmetry. (Received July 24, 2017)