1141-05-49 Steve Butler (butler@iastate.edu). A forest building process.

Given a graph we can build a forest through the following process: Order the edges in some fashion and then only keep edges which are incident to a vertex not incident to any previous edge.

We consider the problem of finding the expected number of components of the resulting tree for various graphs and establish some basic properties.

Joint work with Zhanar Berikkyzy, Jay Cummings, Misa Hamanaka, Marie Hardt, Kristin Heysse, Paul Horn, Ruth Luo, and Brent Moran (Received July 07, 2018)