Values, Immediate and Contributory, and Their Interrelation

By MAURICE PICARD, Ph.D.
Lecturer in Philosophy in Barnard College

This book discusses in a fresh, empirical, and concrete manner, two great classes of values. Its premises are grounded on biological and psychological data rather than in transcendental and metaphysical presuppositions. The origin, development, and co-existence of values, are successively treated. There is an interesting discussion of the possible value of false judgments. Altogether the book lays a solid foundation for research in several new fields of philosophical investigation.

8vo, x+198 pages, cloth bound, price, $3.00

THE NEW YORK UNIVERSITY PRESS
32 WAVERLY PLACE
NEW YORK CITY

ACTIVISM

By HENRY LANE ENO, Research Associate in Psychology, Princeton University.

$1.50 net; by mail, $1.60

“Activism” is a new point of view in philosophy and psychology. By its method of approach many of the old problems,—as the mind-body relation, and the nature of consciousness,—acquire fresh significance and interest.

Princeton University Press
Princeton New Jersey