

July 2017

Dear Colleague,

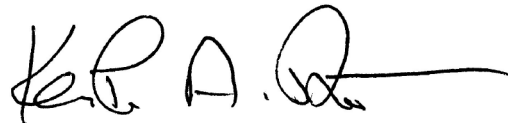

Thank you for your membership in the American Mathematical Society. Through the support of dedicated members like you, the AMS has continued its vital support of the global mathematics sciences community in 2017. Its programs, publications, and meetings have enriched the lives of countless mathematicians and students. I hope that you will take advantage of all that the AMS has to offer in 2018.

We are excited to announce a new member benefit that will soon be available to all individual AMS members: free shipping! In addition to receiving a discount on books purchased through our online bookstore and at meetings, individual members will also be entitled to receive free shipping on their purchases.

We all know the value of making connections in our personal and professional lives. With nearly 30,000 individual members and 570 member institutions, the AMS helps you make those connections with colleagues and friends and provides more opportunities for inspiration and new ideas that enrich our lives.

Together we foster mathematical research, encourage and support early-career mathematicians, advance the reach and access of mathematical publications, and promote the role of mathematics in academia and society at large. Ultimately, the AMS is able to provide those services because of the participation of its dedicated members. I thank you in advance for your ongoing support of the global mathematics sciences community through your continuing AMS membership.

Sincerely,

Kenneth A. Ribet
President, AMS