
American Mathematical Society—Contributions

Dear Friends and Colleagues,

During 2003 your generous support has helped the Society and our profession in many ways. I thank each of you for that support.

The Young Scholars program supports summer workshops for talented high school students—the future of our profession. These programs are an investment in our future. We are now building an endowment, the Epsilon Fund, to support this program, and we hope to reach our goal of two million dollars over the next few years. Young scholars programs work; supporting them is important.

The Centennial Fellowships continue to play a key role for outstanding young mathematicians at the formative stages of their careers, from three to twelve years beyond the degree. The fellowships are funded directly by contributions together with income from the Society's investments.

We use contributions to the General Fund to support all of our activities, from employment services to public awareness and outreach to mathematicians in the developing world.

Your generosity allows the Society to establish and maintain all these programs. Your generosity shows that mathematicians care deeply about our profession. Thank you for that expression of caring.
