American Mathematical Society—Contributions

Dear Friends and Colleagues,

During 2004 your generous support helped the Society and our profession in many ways. I thank each of you for that support.

The Young Scholars program is in its fifth year, supporting summer workshops for talented high school students—the future of our profession. We are building an endowment, the Epsilon Fund, to support this program indefinitely, and we hope to reach our goal of two million dollars over the next few years. Young scholars programs work and supporting them is important for mathematics.

The Centennial Fellowships play a key role for outstanding young mathematicians at the formative stages of their careers, from three to twelve years beyond the degree. The fellowships are funded directly by contributions from mathematicians throughout the world.

We use contributions to the General Fund to support all of our activities, including survey work, public awareness, and outreach to mathematicians in the developing world.

Your generosity allows the Society to carry out all these programs and shows that mathematicians care deeply about our profession. Thank you for that expression of caring.

John H. Ewing
