Mathematical Imagery Page on AMS Website

The AMS has added a new feature to its website, the Mathematical Imagery page. The page includes albums of mathematically inspired and mathematically generated works, which can be sent as e-postcards. Also available on the page are links to online galleries and museums, and to other resources about mathematics and art. New works will frequently be added to the collection. See all the art at <http://www.ams.org/mathimagery>.

Fan China Exchange Program Names Awardees

The Society's Fan China Exchange Program awards grants to support collaborations between Chinese and U.S. or Canadian researchers. Institutions in the United States or Canada apply for the funds to support a visitor from China or vice versa. This funding is made possible through a generous gift made to the AMS by Ky and Yu-Fen Fan in 1999. The awardees for 2006 follow.

Purdue University was awarded a grant to support a visit from Huiyuan Li of the Chinese Academy of Sciences, Laboratory of Parallel Computing, Institute of Software; Rutgers University was awarded a grant to support a visit from Jiguang Bao of Beijing Normal University; and McGill University was awarded a grant to support a visit from Ye Tian of the Chinese Academy of Sciences, Morningside Center, Academy of Mathematics and Systems Science.

For information about the Fan China Exchange Program, visit the website <http://www.ams.org/outreach/chinaexchange.html>, or contact the AMS Membership and Programs Department, email: prof-serv@ams.org,

History Volumes Now Online

The AMS has published three volumes, edited by Peter Duren et al, in its series "A Century of Mathematics in America". These volumes include lectures, reminiscences, historical surveys of mathematical culture and mathematical topics, articles about the development of mathematics in American universities, and brief biographies and tributes by prominent mathematicians of the twentieth century.

These three volumes have now been made freely accessible online as PDF files that may be viewed and downloaded. The URLs for the three volumes are:
