

The AMS Publication Support Fund

A New Opportunity for Giving

As a leading mathematics publisher for over a century, the AMS publishes mathematical books and journals of the highest quality, making them accessible to the community, and compensating authors fairly.

The AMS Publication Support Fund helps underwrite the production and pricing of AMS publications. These texts can be technically sophisticated and complicated to create, are often highly specialized in subject matter and audience, and are at times made available free of charge to the public as a service to the mathematical community. The Fund greatly improves our ability to publish materials that serve mathematics and our community of students and professionals.

Opportunities to establish named endowed funds within the AMS Publication Support Fund are also available.

