

1036-41-16

William Timothy Gowers*, University of Cambridge. Decomposing bounded functions.

Many results in the new and rapidly growing area of arithmetic combinatorics concern, in one way or another, the general problem of writing a function f as a linear combination of other functions with prescribed properties. I shall discuss several results of this kind, explaining why they are important and giving some idea of how they can be proved.

(Received November 14, 2007)